

ARMA PEI Chapter and UPEI Robertson Library
Present an Open Data Workshop

Who left the lights on?

How a government-industry open data partnership is driving innovation in the delivery of electricity load and generation data to Islanders

Can government and business learn to embrace the concept of open data? A cooperative project between the Province of PEI and Maritime Electric to release energy load and generation data in open format proves that sometimes, just maybe, yes!

Participants at this workshop will have an opportunity to look under the hood of projects focused on leveraging the open data provided by Maritime Electric, and learn how open data can best serve citizens looking to community-based build tools and projects.

Peter Rukavina

Peter Rukavina is a computer programmer, web developer, and open data advocate in Charlottetown. In addition to operating Reinvented Inc., a digital consulting company, he is a visiting scholar at Robertson Library, UPEI. Under the title Hacker in Residence, he works to illuminate the work of the library and to explore the promise of open data, open source software, and the hacker ethic.
